(1) These restrictions are inappropriate given the fact that general policies and procedures of the Reading Police Department can be requested and obtained under the Right-to-Know Law. 65 P.S. § 67.101 et seq. The Law exempts from disclosure a record “relating to or resulting in a criminal investigation,” id. § 67.708(b)(16). In construing this provision, our Supreme Court of Pennsylvania made clear that documents and electronic material in the possession of a law enforcement agency are not a per se investigation and whether it “contains criminal investigative material must be determined on a case-by-case basis.” E.g., Pennsylvania State Police v. Grove, 161 A.3d 877, 894 (Pa. 2017) (motor vehicle recordings). Even as to criminal investigations, “the exceptions to disclosure of public records must be narrowly construed.” Id. at 892 (quotation omitted). “The plain meaning of a ‘criminal investigation’ clearly and obviously refers to an official inquiry into a possible crime.” Id. at 892-93. Disclosure of policy documents from a law enforcement agency were compelled by the Office of Open Records and upheld on appeal, in ACLU of Pennsylvania v. Pennsylvania State Police (ACLU I), 232 A.3d 654 (Pa. 2020) and ACLU of Pennsylvania v. Pennsylvania State Police (ACLU II), 300 A.3d 386, 395-96 (Pa. 2023). In that litigation, the ACLU had requested disclosure of the State Police’s AR 6-9, which “establishes policies and procedures for PSP personnel when using social media monitoring software.” ACLU I, 232 A.3d at 508. The OOR determined that this was a policy document, not related to any specific criminal investigation. The same reasoning applies to the aforementioned bates-numbered documents.

(2) Federal law does not recognize any privilege in general policies of a municipal police department. “[T]he public has the strongest interest in maintaining the confidentiality of police files when those files concern an ongoing criminal investigation.” Crawford v. Dominic, 469 F. Supp. 260, 264 (E.D. Pa. 1979). Such privilege does not apply to policies, procedures, and training materials. Casaccia v. City of Rochester, 2020 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37585, at *17-19 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2020). “In the absence of controlling authority, the undersigned will not recognize an expansion of the law enforcement privilege to include documents or manuals containing law enforcement policies and procedures.” United States v. Charles, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102918, at *8 (W.D. La. Dec. 9, 2008).

(3) To the effect that these restrictions may impair my advocacy for another client, the same may run afoul of the Pennsylvania Rules of Professional Responsibility. We shouldn’t allow the Stipulation to create such an unnecessary conflict.

(4) It is an unreasonable burden to file the aforementioned documents under seal when the same were never confidential to begin with.

Based on the foregoing, a court would find that the Stipulation is not enforceable in the specific context of policies and procedures. Rather than fight with each other over this, I request that we do the right thing and treat this letter as a modification.

II. Request to Remove Confidential Designations.

Your office marked as “Confidential” the documents bates-numbered Reading 000073 to 76 (General Order No. 402 relating to Chain of Command) and Reading 000083 to 89 (General Order No. 1402 relating to Internal Affairs Investigations).

Pursuant to Paragraph 15 of the Stipulation, please accept this letter as notice of my request that the “Confidential” designation be removed from the aforementioned documents. I further request that our modification in Part I equally apply to these documents. Once again, these are policy documents unrelated to any criminal investigation. The Office of Open Records would have compelled the unredacted disclosure of General Order Nos. 402 and 1402. In fact, as a matter of public policy, the City would want the public to know this information. For General Order No. 1402, in particular, it would inform citizens that they have an administrative remedy with the Reading Police Department if there was misconduct involving an officer.

The only way a disclosure of General Order No. 1402 could be detrimental to the Police Department is if it gave an unfair advantage to a police officer subject to internal investigation, but that officer would already possess General Order No. 1402.

III. Leave to Amend Complaint in Rusfeldt Case.

Enclosed, please find a “clean” copy and a “markup” copy of an Amended Complaint in the Rusfeldt case that I wish to file. Please inform me (1) whether you consent to the filing of the Amended Complaint and (2) even if you don’t consent, whether you have no objection to the reference in Paragraph 30 of General Order No. 602.

If you consent to the filing of the amended complaint, then Rusfeldt will submit a motion to the Court to extend the discovery deadline, as we briefly discussed earlier today.
